It is in this and a spirit of union that we as citizens must work if we expect our village to reach the point of beauty and prosperity which it is capable of doing.

The following is copied from the Manchester, N. H., Mirror:

Fred N. Cheney, a former well-known insurance man of this city, has been awarded a prize of $5000 offered by the Mutual Life insurance company of New York to the agent doing the largest amount of business during the year 1904, and having the best equipped office. Mr. Cheney has been pleasantly located at St. Louis for some time, where he has met with great success in the insurance business. He was formerly connected with his brother, R. H. Cheney, in this city, as agents for the same insurance company. He is a hustler and, as his friends say, an all around good fellow.

The history, "Causes Which Led to the Civil War," was read by Mrs. Blake; papers were prepared and read on "Anti-Slavery Agitators," by Mrs. Pierce on "John Brown," Mrs. Aldrich on "W. L. Garrison," and Mrs. Webster on "The Life and Work of Wendell Phillips," which were listened to with much interest. One of Whittier's beautiful poems, "The Yankee Girl," was read by Mrs. Flanders. Conversation on the authors who influenced the anti-slavery movement in which Mrs. Stowe, Julia Ward Howe, Whittier, Lowell and others were mentioned, closed with an instructive pronouncing contest.

This community was saddened to learn of the death of Mrs. Lydia S. Drew last Thursday morning. She had been in apparent good health until about four weeks ago when she had some trouble with a tooth which later developed blood poison and caused her death. Mrs. Drew was the daughter of Emory and Joanna Mason and was born June 7th, 1851, in Albany, where she spent much of her life. On March 29, 1884, she married Ormond G. Drew of this town, and lived on the Drew farm from that time until her death. She was a very active member of the Methodist church here and has done much by her presence and benevolence to support the church, and help every good cause which it represents. She possessed a beautiful character, was large-hearted, industrious, kind to the poor, ever ready to help those who needed help, cheerful, exhibiting a splendid type of Christian womanhood. She had no enemies, but a large circle of friends both in the church and community. She always greeted her friends with a smile, and had the faculty of making others happy in her presence. During her sickness she was a great sufferer but bore her affliction with Christian fortitude. She leaves to mourn her loss her husband, her brother, Roswell Mason of Glover, a sister living in the west, the members of her husband's family, and many more distant relatives and friends. The funeral was attended at the house on Saturday at one o'clock in the afternoon; Rev. W. C. Johnson officiating. Interment in the village cemetery.

The following is taken from the Boston Globe of March 16 and shows something of how horsemen look at "Ecstacy" and her driver:

"Audubon Boy," 2:03; and "Ecstacy" 2:05; respectively, the fastest stallion and mare owned in New England, will meet in a dual race over the New England breeders' track in Readville, Thursday, Aug. 24, the fourth day of Boston's grand circuit meeting. The match is for $10,000, $5000 a side, and is the result of the sweeping challenge which was published in the Globe last Monday. James Gatecomb, the owner of "Audubon Boy," and John Dorey, representing the owner of "Ecstacy," met at the Globe office yesterday and in a very few minutes the match was arranged. "Ecstacy" made a splendid campaign last year, losing only one race, her first start at Worcester. Her racing was over mile and half-mile tracks in the west and east. Her record of 2:05 was made at Hamline, Minn., over a track considered slow, and she was timed in 2:03 from wire to wire. At the fall meeting at Readville she won a race which stamped her one of the very greatest of pacing mares, the time being 2:03; 2:03; 2:03; and fast as they were, she reeled off the miles with ease. She is six years old and has always been driven and trained by Frank Lang, the clever Vermont reinsman, who will fit and handle her in her coming match. She is owned and raced by Roaring Brook stable, Barton, Vt. The best of judges speak of her as a sure two-minute pacer, as they do also of the great horse she is matched against. Both owners have unbounded faith in their horses, and until they meet at Readville next August each man will be happy in the belief that he owns the fastest harness racehorse in the world.

The lecture delivered by Hon. Chas. E. Littlefield last Tuesday evening closed the lectures of the course for the season. The lectures and concerts of the course have all been of an high order, but have not been patronized as fully as they deserved. The lecture of Tuesday evening ranks well up with those of the season. In some respects it was the most instructive of any one given during the winter. It was specially adapted to interest a class of people who are trying to solve the national problems and are looking to the lawmakers at Washington to formulate means to give suffrage rights to a large class of citizens who have been disfranchised by several southern states. Mr. Littlefield opened his lecture by making the statement that there could be no civilization without education, but there could be education without civilization. In order to reach a high state of civilization there must have preceded it education, evolution and development for long periods of time. This alone accounted for the production of men of remarkable genius who seemed to absorb all knowledge, from past generations and present developments. This was true also in animal development. Back of Lou Dillon was a long line of speedy ancestors. It required many generations to produce a horse that could trot a mile in one minute and fifty-eight and one-half seconds. "The education of the boy should begin with his grandfather," he illustrated by referring to Shakespeare, Mozart, Napoleon, Michel Angelo, Ralph Waldo Emerson, Lincoln and other men of renown as products of the high civilization of the nations. He discussed the race problem to considerable extent and showed the difficulty of enacting laws to remedy the evil. He referred to the House of Representatives as the body that does things, and to the national Senate as the body that obstructs legislation, or prevents legislation by the unwritten "law of senate courtesy," which permits endless discussion by senators of bills before the senate. He showed that the negro race was making great advancement, but labored under the handicap of only one hundred years of civilization, while the white race has 2000 years of Christian civilization back of it. Mr. Littlefield is bright, sharp and witty. He employs a rich diction, is happy in his illustrations, and is a master of his subject.

The Thespian scored another victory Friday evening in the presentation of the play entitled "Up Vermont Way." The house was filled to overflowing and we venture to say that not one went away dissatisfied. President E. A. Willey and other officers and the stage manager, H. B. Rood are to be congratulated on the smooth way in which everything transpired. The play was well staged, characters were well fitted to their parts and put life into the acting. Mr. and Mrs. Townsley and H. B. Rood as their son Jack rendered their parts in a very pleasing manner and won much applause from the audience.

Seth Sappy, A. W. Fletcher and Patty Plum, Mrs. E. E. Mathews, were the characters who kept the audience smiling—pretty loud smiles too. Lonesome Low, Walleyed Wallace, Will Morey and E. D. Stafford had difficult parts but they were well carried out and met with the approval of the spectators as was shown by repeated applause. Fatty Wall was the man who "seconded the motion" and was acted in the person of Will Hildreth in an excellent manner. Minnie Stannard as Alice Armcliffe and W. F. Brown as Malcolm Baldwin had difficult parts but they were well executed. Nathan Stimpson, who took the part of Justin Cottam played the part well and to the satisfaction of the audience. Blinky Bly, Thomas Landon, and Peel, Alton Doe, played their parts equally as well as the others. The play was followed by a dance to which a large number stayed. The play is to be repeated on the evening of May 5. We bespeak for them another full house.
